

ABSTRACT

A model is disclosed for a system of an image reproducing device and a medium, which produces an image by way of light modulators. A relationship between image control data and light modulation values is described by the model. A relationship is generated between the light modulation values and the modulation color values by a modeled light incidence onto the light modulators.